→ Why you do what you do

An eighth-grade student at one of the schools in the Monroe 2-Orleans BOCES in New York wrote the following poem as part of an anti-bullying project...and for her librarian. The author has asked to remain anonymous, but would like the poem to be shared.

Surrounded by books,
That make my day.
I read these stories,
Get lost in their pages,
Find joy in the simplest of things,
My message here to you is...

"Books are my family,

My friends,
And I disappear inside them,
To escape the people who insisted,
I disappear for real."

Books saved me from bullies,
And you gave me those books,
That saved me,
That saved my life,
Thank you.
I only ask one thing of you,
Pass this poem on,
Give it to your family,
Your friends,
Anyone who will listen.
Post in on a website,
Something,
Just as long as the message is heard.
Books saved my life from bullying.
Give a book,
Save a life.
